ORAL JUDGEMENT :

By this application under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, the petitioner challenges the legality and validity of the detention order dated 6.12.1997 passed against him by the Police Commissioner for the city of Ahmedabad invoking his powers under sec.3(2) of the Gujarat Prevention of Anti Social Activities Act (for short "the Act") pursuant to which the petitioner is arrested and at present kept under detention.

2. The Police Commissioner for the city of Ahmedabad came to know that the petitioner was creating terror in the society and disturbing public order by committing several offences and the people were tired of the wrongs done by him. After the Police Commissioner studied several records available from different Police Stations he knew that four complaints were lodged against the petitioner, of them one with Vejalpur and another with Satellite Police Stations and rest two complaints with Ellis Bridge Police Station. In all the cases it is alleged that the petitioner committed theft and made attempt to commit theft and thereby committed offences punishable under sections 380, 511, 457, 454 read with sec.114 of IPC. The Police Commissioner had a reason to believe perusing the record that the petitioner was a dangerous person and by his subversive activities he was terrorising the people. He used to wield lethal weapons and pointing weapons he used to put the people in fear of instant death or grievous hurt. He used to extort money or commit theft and compel people to bend his way. No one was willing to lodge complaint against him because of fear of violence. Every one preferred to suffer miseries rather than inviting deadly attack endangering his safety. Some statements were tried to be recorded, but no one was willing to give statement because of fear of violence. After considerable persuasion some of the persons showed their willingness to give statement. Their particulars disclosing their identity is not given. Perusing the statements recorded the Police Commissioner was satisfied that the petitioner is a dangerous person and by his nefarious and subversive activities, he was disturbing public order creating panic and psychosis in the minds of the people. Immediate action to curb his activities was necessary, but he also realised that any action, if initiated under the general law would be a futile exercise. After cogitation he found that the only way out was to pass order of detention. In the result the impugned order came to be passed. At present the petitioner is, therefore, kept under detention.

3. While challenging the order, the petitioner has raised several grounds, but, at the time of hearing, the learned advocate representing the petitioner confined to the only point namely exercise of privilege under section 9(2) of the Act, going to the root of the case. Both the parties, therefore, submitted on that point. I will, therefore, confine to that point only.

4. Before I proceed, it would be better if the law about non disclosure of certain facts is elucidated. Reading Article 22(5) of the Constitution of India, what becomes clear is that the grounds on which order of detention is passed are required to be communicated to the detenu. The detenu is, therefore, required to be informed not merely factual inference and factual material which led to inference namely not to disclose certain facts, but also the sources from which the factual material is gathered. The disclosure of sources can enable the detenu to draw the attention of the detaining authority in the course of his representation to the fact whether the factual material collected from such sources would be relied upon and used against him on the facts and circumstances of the case. Subject to the limitation mentioned in Article 22(6) of the Constitution of India and section 9(2) of the Act, the detaining authority is of course empowered to withhold such facts and particulars, the disclosure of which he considers to be against the public interest. The privilege of non disclosure has to be exercised sparingly and in those cases, where public interest dictating non disclosure overrides the public interest requiring disclosure. Hence the detaining authority must be fully satisfied on the basis of overall study that the apprehension expressed by the informant is honest, genuine and reasonable in the circumstances of the case. With a view to satisfy itself whether the fear of violence and consequential feelings of insecurity or apprehension of a wrong would be done to them at any time by the detenu by those making statement against the detenu is imaginary or fanciful; or an empty excuse or well founded for disclosing or not disclosing certain facts or particulars of those persons, the authority making the order has to make necessary inquiry applying his mind. What can be deduced from some constitutional as well as legal scheme whereunder obligation to furnish the grounds and the duty to consider whether the disclosure of any facts involved therein is against public interest are both vested in the detaining authority and not in any other. The authority passing the order of detention has to apply his mind and should itself be satisfied to the question whether or not the supply of the relevant particulars and materials would be injurious to the public interest. If the task of recording statements and necessary inquiry is entrusted to others, and if he mechanically endorses or accepts the recommendation of others or subordinate authority in that behalf without applying mind and taking his own decision, the exercise of power would be vitiated as arbitrary. What is further required is that the detaining authority must file his affidavit to satisfy the court that he had sincerely and honestly applied the mind for the bonafide exercise of the powers about disclosure and privilege regarding non disclosure so that the court can examine rational connection between the ground disclosed or not disclosed in public interest. If no affidavit explaining the exercise of the power is filed, the court can infer against the detaining authority. If the affidavit is filed explaining the exercise of the power, the detenu may challenge the privilege exercised on the ground that the same is vitiated by factual or legal malafides. For my such view, a reference of a decision in the case of Bai Amina, w/o Ibrahim Abdul Rahim Alla v. State of Gujarat and others, 22 GLR 1186 held to be the good law by the Full Bench of this Court in the case of Chandrakant N. Patel v. State of Gujarat and others 35(1) [1994(1)] GLR 761, may be made.

5. In view of such law, it was absolutely necessary on the part of the detaining authority to file affidavit and explain what were the circumstances and facts which led him to exercise his jurisdiction in the public interest. It is pertinent to note that no such affidavit is filed. It can, therefore, be assumed that without application of mind and without just cause, the privilege is exercised. Reading the order it appears that the task to ascertain whether fear expressed by the witnesses is honest or genuine, or is imaginary or merely an excuse was entrusted to the subordinate officer. Whatever report was sent, the detaining authority, reposing trust in the officer accepted the same and passed the order. He has, thus, passed the order without application of mind and without examining the report as to whether it was reliable and hence the subjective satisfaction of the detaining authority is vitiated. The facts suppressed ought to have been furnished to the petitioner. Had the same been furnished the petitioner could have pointed out before the authority as to how those statements were not reliable. Right to make effective representation is thus violated. The continued detention, therefore, cannot be held to be constitutional and legal. The order of detention is, therefore, required to be quashed.

6. For the aforesaid reasons the application is allowed. The order of detention dated 6.12.1997 passed by the Police Commissioner for the city of Ahmedabad is hereby quashed and set aside. The petitioner is ordered to be set at liberty forthwith, if he is not required in any other case. Rule is accordingly made absolute.
